Who and what are the “Seraphim?”

Throughout time and all walks of life, Humanity has known of light beings, silent guardians... Angels. They have come to testify, inspire us, comfort us, help us, and protect us. They live among us. The Seraphim, are the angelic light beings written about in many texts, in many walks, and described in the books of Isaiah and Revelation as having six wings and who dwell in the direct presence of God. They are considered the highest order of angels whose name means “the fiery ones” — beings of light, pure love and of music. They have appeared and have been inspiration throughout time to many, and to a special man, Isaiah, which inspired him to write his namesake book.

How does the show begin?

The show opens with an introduction by Seay and a welcome into the World of Light, A premise to engage the senses in this wondrous journey of the awakened heart mind spirit.

The show then overlays into the ancient Kingdom of Judah, approximately 700 B.C. As the scene sweeps from the heavens into the ancient land, it descends upon a single abode and a solitary man inside — this is the prophet Isaiah, before he wrote his namesake book. He appears contemplative before a blank scroll and quill before him as if he is tasked to do something with it, but is unsure what. Then something rustles in the modest dwelling, not disturbing, but enough to catch Isaiah's attention. A streak of light flies by in stark contrast to the dim lighting inside. Then another and another, until the ceiling appears to be torn open with a brilliant flash. A being of almost pure light emerges — this is an angel, a light being, a Seraphim. In its hand is a brilliant, burning coal — fiery, but not frightening. It reaches out and touches Isaiah's mouth with it, not burning him, but instead causing the heavens to open up in a spectacular blaze. Isaiah is engulfed in a vision and we see what he sees -

How do we journey into the World of Light?

We begin our journey up through the earthly realm, and in a flash into otherworldly places and dimensions: The universe, portals of beauty, awe and wonder. Alongside us these flashes and balls (perhaps in different colors) will be a theme in the world of light leading us, following us, appearing randomly in the show. We will visit the realms of awakening, transcendence, otherworldly luminous places filled with color, imagery, mandalas, fractal imagery, universes, sacred geometry mandalas, billowing clouds, places of inspiration, places of imagination, places of music, love, comfort, healing, wellbeing, peace and divinity.

Our approach is to engage the senses in an alchemical world of beauty, awe, wonder and play, to bring about a sense of wellbeing and positivity, and perhaps showing our capacity for the light within us, for our own compassion, love, peace, positivity.

This is where almost unlimited creative possibilities open up for the show.

How does the show end?

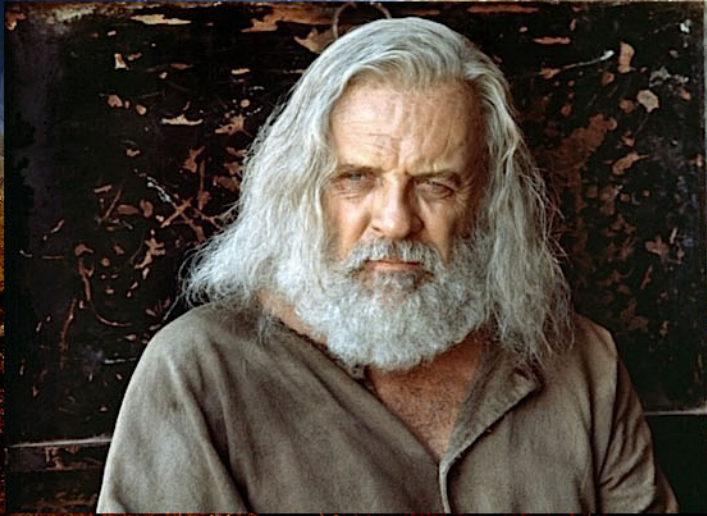

The show comes to a close with Seay speaking.

We return to Isaiah, now a few years older, the blank scroll before him is full of text. He rolls up the scroll — his eyes filled with contentment and wisdom and his face beaming with light. His book is now complete. Invisible beings of light surround him and us. His mind drifts off, the camera withdraws back into the sky and space, we see the same light beings all around the Earth, twinkling, dwelling above us in the heavenly realms and around us. They guard and inspire us now as they did then.

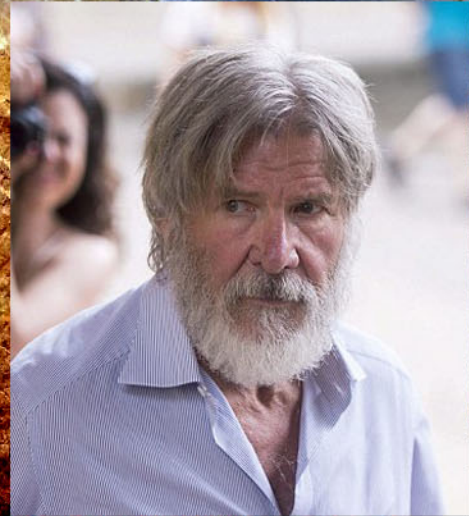

We see the depiction of time moving ahead to the modern day world, Modern night lights are visible on Earth. We zoom in, depicting people of all ages their faces hearts filled with light demonstrating acts of kindness, comfort and inspiration.

Who will play the prophet character, Isaiah?

With the 5 minute beginning and ending of the show being live action, our “dream cast” for Isaiah is a known celebrity. We believe it would greatly increase the audience draw to the show and to the fulldome venue in general. Our “dream cast” actors are...

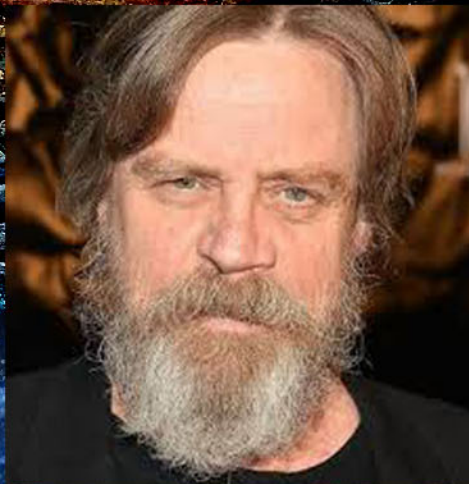

Anthony Hopkins

Harrison Ford

Viggo Mortensen

Mark Hamill
